PAPER 2
SECTION I - ENVIRONMENT
[Compulsory]

1. Across Ghana, many communities depend on rivers and water bodies for drinking, farming, and fishing. Your class has been chosen by the District Assembly to help address concerns about the changing condition of water sources in the country. As young leaders, your task is to study the problem and propose solutions that can protect Ghana's water for future generations.

a) As part of your investigation, identify four causes of water pollution in Ghana.

[4marks]

- Galamsey / Illegal small-scale mining
- Industrial waste
- Plastic and domestic waste dumping
- Poor sewage and open defecation
- Agricultural runoff (fertilizers & pesticides)
- Sand winning and building near water bodies
- Oil and fuel spills

[1mark each for any 4]

b) Explain four effects of water pollution that your team should be aware of. [4marks]

- Death of fishes is an effect of water pollution

Chemicals and heavy metals that enter waterways can kill fish. Exposure to heavy metals impairs the ability of a fish to smell. This disrupts the fish to locate food and protect itself from predatory animals.

- Water pollution brings diseases

Drinking of polluted water has adverse effects on human health. Regular intake of contaminated water can cause waterborne diseases like typhoid, cholera and hepatitis.

- Lack of potable water is an effect of water pollution

Humans and animals depend on decent and wholesome water for survival. When water is polluted, people will find it difficult to access good drinking water.

- Water pollution affects tourism

Some lakes and rivers in Ghana serve as a source of tourist attraction. Pollution of water bodies pushes a lot of tourists to stay away from such centres.

- Leads to bad odour and unattractive environment

Polluted water bodies produce bad smell and become unpleasant to live near.

- Increases cost of water treatment

When water is heavily polluted, Ghana Water Company spends more money to treat it before it can be supplied to homes.

[1mark each for any four]

c) Discuss four ways your community can prevent further water pollution in Ghana.

[12marks]

- Improved water closets and latrines

Toilet facilities in homes and public should be given a facelift. People will patronise these important facilities and stop open defaecation along water bodies.

- There should be public education

Public education should be carried out on various media platforms to sensitise the public to the repercussions of water pollution. A lot of people will adhere to the education and refrain from the act.

- Responsible use of agrochemicals

Extension officers and farmers should be educated on the proper application of pesticides and weedicides. This will go a long way to prevent agrochemicals from entering into water bodies.

- Construction of silt fence

Construction of silt fence helps to check the menace of water pollution. At times when it rains, water carries the sand into rivers and streams and pollute the water bodies. Through the construction of silt fence, water pollution can be checked.

- There should be proper disposal of waste

There should be proper management of industrial and solid wastes. Managers of industries should do well to recycle their wastes regularly. Sanitation laws should be strictly enforced to sanction people who litter on the streets.

SECTION II
LAW, ORDER AND NATION BUILDING

Answer one question only from this section.

2. a) As a learner studying Ghana's population structure, define and explain to members of your community how each of the following factors contribute to population change in Ghana:

i. Birth rate

Birth rate is defined as the number of births per year per thousand of population in a given community. More births have led to increase in population of the country. As a result, government needs to expand facilities to cater for the large population. Government has to strategise its economic policies to cater for the increasing population. More markets have to be built, schools expanded, major roads constructed and new hospitals put up. All these are done to put the economy at the right pedestal.

ii. Death rate

Death rate is the ratio of deaths of the population in a particular area or during particular period of time. Death rate is the ratio of deaths to the population of a particular area. It is usually calculated as the number of deaths per one thousand people per year. More deaths through diseases, accidents and natural catastrophes decrease the population of a country. The reverse is the vice versa.

iii. Migration [12marks]

Migration is the movement of people from one place to another. People migrate to other areas based on certain factors and reasons. Some factors responsible for migration are seeking of greener pastures to attain better livelihood, fleeing a war torn country, pursuance of further education, seeking political asylum and joining a football club abroad. Most foreign nationals who migrate to Ghana are from neighbouring West African countries like Nigeria, Burkina Faso, Niger, Mali, Togo and Benin.

[4marks each]

b) What factors have contributed to high birth rate in your district or municipality? Identify four of them and explain how they affect the birth rate in your community. [8marks]

- Early marriages

Early marriages have led to increment in the number of births in the country. When people marry early there is the likelihood that the number of births will be higher especially when the couple starts to give birth early. This has brought about sharp increase in the population of the country.

- Poverty

Poverty has also contributed to high birth rates in our part of the world. In villages where poverty levels are high, people share fun with their partners as their only means of enjoyment. The close relationship between couples can contribute to more births.

- Inadequate recreational facilities

Inadequate recreational facilities or centres have deprived many of entertainment and recreation. As explained earlier, some couples frequently use their spouses to erase any stress or boredom. This also has contributed to higher births and population increase.

- Lack of family planning

Lack of family planning has also brought about high birth rate in the country. People cannot cut down on the number of births due to some known reasons. Couples continue to give birth without finding a way to limit or stop it. This also contributes to population growth in the country.

- Labour force

Families need labour to work on farms and plantations. People give more births due to this reason without thinking about the undue burden it may bring to the country. In villages, the labour force needed on farms has forced many couples to have more children.

- Low standard of education

Low standard of education has also contributed to high births in our country. Many people attach prestige to giving more births and having more children. It is only through education and knowledge that will make couples to limit births but that has not been the case in the country.

[2marks each for any 4]
[award only one point each for mere mentioning of point]

3. Kofi, a fellow leaner in another school, has not yet been introduced to the topic of conflict in school. However, he has observed persistent misunderstandings and tensions among residents in his local community and is now seeking your guidance.

a) As a learner of Social Studies, Enlighten Kofi on five factors that could be responsible for conflict in his community. [5marks]

- Greed/Dishonesty
- Injustices in the society
- Discrimination/Ethnicity
- Intolerance of opposing views
- Loss of security or inadequate security
- Struggle for power among groups or individuals
- Suspicion among people
- Unfair distribution of resources
- Land disputes

[1mark each for any five]

b) Outline five possible consequences of such conflict on the development of his community. [5marks]

- I t breeds hatred and enmity among feuding factions
- It brings about poverty and famine
- It leads to destruction of life and property
- Displacement of people
- It leads to slow pace of development

- It leads to outbreak of diseases
- It leads to abuse of human rights
- It leads to diversion of resources

[1mark each for any five]

c) Explain to Kofi five essential conditions that must be established to foster peace building in his community. [10marks]

- Forgiveness

Forgiveness is one of the attitudes needed to prevent conflict. Feuding factions can forgive each other and forget about the wrongs and forge ahead in unity. This can calm down tensions associated with conflict.

- Consensus building

Consensus building is needed to settle conflicts that involve multiple parties and multiple issues. Through consensus building, all concerns are raised and addressed until all voices are heard for understanding to reign among feuding factions.

- Efficient law enforcement system

There should be an efficient law enforcement system to deal with conflict. The law should be able to track down and apprehend every suspected person behind conflict and disturbances. When found guilty of the charges they should be made to face the full rigours of the law to serve as a deterrent to others.

- Existence of conflict resolution institutions

Conflict resolution institutions are able to manage and curtail conflicts to an extent. A country needs these professional institutions to manage and find a lasting solution to conflicts especially in volatile areas.

- Constructive communication among people

There should be proper communication flow in the country where all constructive criticisms are welcomed. When people's voices and concerns are respected and accepted, conflict is likely to be reduced or prevented.

- Tolerance

Tolerance of divergent or opposing views is good for governing the country. All will feel part of the governance process in the country under such circumstances. This paves the way for conflict prevention.

- Respect for human rights

Respect for human rights sets a good pace for conflict prevention. When individuals or community members are made to enjoy their rights to the full, conflict will be prevented from occurring.

- Justice and fairness

Justice and fairness work in consonance with respect for human rights. When government institutions are just and neutral in their duties, the people will repose their confidence in such institutions and live peacefully.

- Compromise

At times, we must be able to compromise on our hard stance. Aggrieved parties must put their egos aside and find possible solutions to developmental problems affecting both sides.

SECTION III
SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT.

Answer one question only from this section.

4. a) Explain to your classmate who was absent when a lesson on financial investment was treated, the difference between Social Security and Pension Scheme [4marks]

- Language acquisition
- Proper interaction and co-operation [Any 4 for 8 marks]

(c) Reasons why it is important for a nation to socialize its citizens.

- Socialization is a form of training that prepares a person to fit very well into the larger community.
- Socialization ensures that the individual conforms to acceptable behaviours of society. This is so because effective socialization minimizes deviant behaviour in society.
- A nation needs to help in the socialization process since it ensures a stable social, economic, and political environment.
- Socialization helps to achieve national integration, unity and solidarity among children in the society. For example, a well-socialized Ghanaian is conversant with the national symbols and patriotic songs of the nation.
- Socialization assists in developing a sense of self since it is a role-learning process that enables people to occupy appropriate positions in society.
- Socialization also helps in maintaining the culture of society. It involves the imparting of the values and culture of the society from one generation to the other.
- Socialization gives a sense of identity/belonging because learning and projection of the society's culture is a way of demonstrating who a person is and where he/she comes from.
- Socialization instils discipline in children. For example, he or she upholds respect for chiefs and elders in the community.
- Socialization helps to reduce the state of frustration or rejection among individuals.
