PAPER 2

SECTION A
COMPULSORY

1. At Abura, a rich young man, Mr. Sarpong, has bought a large land containing a sacred forest, a river and many animals. He announced to the community that he will clear the forest to build a factory, saying: "God doesn't need human beings. These plants and animals are useless, and there is nothing so special about God's creation that my engineers cannot do." Some of the youth support him because of the promise of jobs. You, as a youth leader who understands Religious and Moral Education, are called upon to address the Chief and his elders on this matter.

(a) What four arguments would you advance to challenge Mr. Sarpong's claim that human beings are of no use to God? [4 marks]

- Humankind is God's representative on earth and has dominion over all other creatures.
- Humankind takes care of and ensures the proper upkeep of God's creation.
- Humankind serves or worships God the Creator.
- Humankind also has the ability to invent or come out with new technology to promote God's creation.
- Humankind carries out God's commandments or instructions on earth.
- Humankind shares in God's creative activity.
- Humankind is to display the attributes of God and be at peace with all creatures.
- They ensure the continuity of human creation by marrying and having children.

[1mark each for any four]

(b) In two ways each, how would you convince the gathering that the plants and animals in the sacred forest that Mr. Sarpong wants to destroy still have value? [4 marks]

Usefulness of Animals

- They serve as a source of food for mankind. The meat from these animals is used to prepare food.
- The skin of some livestock like sheep, goat, and cow give us wool for clothing and leather used for making shoes, bags and belts.
- Some animals serve as pets or companions to mankind, e.g. cat, dog and parrot.
- Some animals are also used for security purposes to protect lives and property, e.g. dogs.
- They provide manure for farming, e.g. the faeces of sheep, goat and cattle.
- Animals such as sheep and fowl are used for making sacrifice to the deities.

[1mark each for any two]

Usefulness of Plants

- Many plants and the fruits they bear serve as a source of food for mankind and animals. For example, fruits (pear, mango, banana, orange); tubers (cassava, yam, cocoyam) and vegetables (pepper, lettuce, garden eggs).
- Plants provide shade and shelter for us to take our rest and play games.
- Some plants and trees serve as living places for some animals.

- They prevent loss of water from the land and water bodies.
- Herbs, roots and barks of plants and trees serve as a source of medicine.
- They provide us firewood as a source of fuel.
- They provide wood to build houses and engage in other construction works.
- Plants and trees serve as windbreaks to reduce the adverse effects of wind and water.
- Some plants are used to beautify of the environment.

[1mark each for any 2]

(c) Explain four evidence from the complexity of the natural world you would present to show that God's creation reveals a wisdom and power beyond human engineering? [12 marks]

- Changes in Seasons

The changing of seasons reveals God's complex and wise nature. It is not easy for humans to fully understand how seasons change from harmattan to autumn, winter, and summer. This shows that God does things that are beyond human understanding.

- Things Done in Seasons

God designed the seasons so that different activities happen at specific times. In farming, for example, there are seasons suitable for planting certain crops. Many major human activities also take place in particular seasons of the year.

- Beauty in Nature

When we carefully observe God's creation, we see how beautiful it is. The way God arranged everything He created, and the beauty and wonder that comes with it, is amazing. This alone proves the complexity and greatness of God.

- Created Things Depend on Each Other

No creation of God is unimportant. All creations depend on one another to survive. For example, human beings depend on plants and animals for food, while human beings also care for the environment to help plants and animals survive.

- Formation and Falling of Rain

We cannot fully understand God when we consider how rain is formed in the clouds. It is also amazing why rain does not fall to the earth at once like water poured from a bucket, but falls in droplets. All these show that God is complex and works in mysterious ways.

- A Child's Natural Knowledge of God

As a child grows up, no one has to teach him that God exists. The child naturally acknowledges God even without his parents making him aware of Him. This proves the complexity of God beyond understanding.

- Rivers flowing into the sea

There are many rivers on this earth and all of these rivers find their way into the sea. All these rivers have separate paths in entering the sea. It is beyond comprehension that the sea does not get full even when the rivers flow into.

[3 marks each for any 4]

[award only one mark each for mere mentioning of points]

SECTION B

Answer two questions only from this section

2. Kojo is a 19-year-old boy in Adukrom. He is hardworking and intelligent, but many people in the community complain about his habits. When his name was presented to represent the youth at a district program, the elders and even his own friends objected. They said his daily habits show that he was not well trained at home. Kojo was surprised because he thought he had done nothing wrong.

(a) Outline four habits that could have helped Kojo to be accepted to represent the youth. [8 marks]

- Respecting authority and all people
- Obeying community rules and regulations
- Practicing patience and tolerance
- Using appropriate greetings and responses
- Speaking politely
- Prioritizing the elderly in times of need
- Dressing modestly and decently
- Admitting faults and striving to improve
- Observing proper table manners
- Maintaining cleanliness at home and in the environment
- Being approachable and sociable

[2marks each for any 4]

(b) Explain four ways the community of Adukrom would benefit if the youth exhibited such habits. [12 marks]

- It attracts both material and spiritual blessings.

When you have good manners, people like you and want to help you, which brings material benefits. It also pleases God and attracts His blessings.

- It enables peaceful co-existence with others in society.

Good manners prevent misunderstandings and quarrels. When you are polite and respectful, you can live peacefully with everyone around you.

- It helps to reduce crime in society.

Most crimes come from anger, disrespect, and indiscipline. A person with good manners is patient and tolerant, so he or she will not engage in criminal acts.

- It gives you the opportunity to take on greater responsibilities and become a role model.

People trust well-mannered persons. Because of that, they are chosen for leadership positions and other important duties, and others look up to them as examples.

- It helps you earn the respect and trust of other people.

When you greet properly, speak politely, and respect others, people will respect and trust you in return.

- It helps you to focus on performing your religious duties.

Good manners bring peace of mind. When you are not involved in conflicts, you can concentrate well on worship and other religious duties.

- It builds self-respect and self-esteem.

A well-mannered person feels good about himself or herself because he or she knows they are doing what is right, and this increases self-confidence.

- It helps people to live pure and happy lives.

Good manners keep you away from bad behaviors like insulting, fighting, and immoral dressing. This helps you live a clean, decent, and happy life.

- It shows good training and proper upbringing.

Your behavior shows the kind of home you come from. Good manners prove that you were well trained by your parents and teachers.

- It helps prevent sexually transmitted diseases.

Practices like decent dressing, avoiding immoral behavior, and living a pure life protect you from engaging in risky sexual activities that cause sexually transmitted diseases.

(d) Describe four moral values that can help stop such dishonest practices in Ghana.

[8 marks]

- Leadership by example: To fight bribery and corruption, leaders must lead well in order for improvement to be felt in the lives of the people. When people's conditions of life are better, the incidence of bribery and corruption will be reduced to the barest minimum.
- Blend moral and academic training as a basis for employing workers. The public needs to be reminded that corruption is immoral. Public education on bribery and corruption should be part of religious sermons and the programmes of schools. The mass media – TV, radio stations and newspapers should also be involved in the drive and places of work to reduce corruption in workplaces and society.
- Be content with what you have honestly earned. People must be content with what they have and work honestly to improve their condition of life.
- Good name is better than riches. It is important to protect one's integrity instead of making wealth through dubious means as they say "good name is better than riches".
- Societal sensitization. There should be intensive sensitization in the home, community, society, etc to educate and enlighten people about the ill effects of corruption on the Ghanaian economy.
